

VIXIE'S VIEWS

So many of you know that our daughter, Elisa, and her husband and baby live in Israel, and we have heard from so many of you, asking about their safety and letting us know that you are praying for them. Words can't express my gratefulness to you for your concern and prayers. The events of October 7th and the uncertainty that it has brought have been difficult, yet I have learned to lean on G-d and His peace in ways that I never have before. So many emotions have swirled through my mind and my heart but one thing I know: my G-d can, and will, sustain me, no matter what the outcome might be.

Yuri was called back to the military on October 7th and remains there at the time of this writing. They live in Karmiel, in northern Israel, and Elisa and Eliana have had to retreat into their bomb shelter once as the sirens began blaring. Thankfully there were no rockets and I pray that it remains that way.

"Please, if there is a god, any god, please help me now," was the cry heard throughout Israel on October 7th. As I watched the news and accounts of survivors of these horrific attacks, these were the words that I heard repeatedly from so many Israelis, young and old. Our hearts were broken as we watched these precious ones, so loved by G-d, cry out in fear for their lives, not knowing that there is indeed a G-d who loves them and is longing to help them. How heavyhearted we felt as we saw these precious ones, living within the borders of Israel and so loved by G-d, yet totally oblivious to His presence, cry out in desperation. But we know that there is indeed a living G-d, who is waiting with outstretched hands to receive His people into the promises He has for them. And that is why we began Children of Jacob and why we are grateful for you, our prayer warriors and supporters. Because of your prayers and your giving we are able to come alongside our ministry partners on the ground in Israel as they provide for the physical and the spiritual needs of those around them. Thank you for your support and your prayers; we are grateful for them.

Through Children of Jacob, you now have the exciting opportunity to be a part of what God is doing among His chosen people throughout the world in these last days.
